

The Syndicate Network (SN) is a 'living network of scholarship in the Humanities' which runs symposia on new books, principally in the fields of philosophy, theology and comparative literature. Their symposia last 4 to 5 weeks. Each week consists of a panellist's take on a given book and a response by the author. During that week, audiences can follow the takes and responses and post comments. It works like a seminar, but with more time and flexibility for reflection.

The SN are running a symposium on Paul Allen Miller's Foucault's Seminars on Antiquity, published in the Bloomsbury series Classical Reception in Twentieth-Century Writing. It begins on March 29 and continues through April 5, 12, 19 and 26. If you would like to follow the symposium, please enter your name and email address here and you will receive a prompt when the event begins.

Programme (all responses by P.A. Miller)

March 29:

Introduction: Laura Jansen (University of Bristol)

Mario Telò (UC Berkeley)

April 5:

Sara Brill (Fairfield University)

April 12:

Kirk Ormand (Oberlin College)

April 19:

Jill Frank (Cornell University)

April 26:

Zahi Zalloua (Whitman College)

If you would like to follow the symposium, please enter your name and email address here and you will receive a prompt when the event begins.