

Feitosa, L. ; Favarsani, F. (2003) “On the feminine and the citizenship in Pompeii”, Pyrenae (Barcelona), Barcelona, v. 3 e 4, 251-57.

In the last few years, recent studies have been criticizing interpretative paradigms that have been excluding women from the public space and citizenry. This paper aims to make us think about the wrong idea of female confinement at home and her exclusion from public life and levels of power, during the first century AD. The analysis of several inscriptions from Pompeii has been important in order to discuss the image of Roman women.